UNICEF programs supported by donations from Switzerland and Liechtenstein

UNICEF Switzerland and Liechtenstein supports programs in various countries. Their primary purpose is to pilot new, innovative measures and then work with governments to extend them to a larger number of people, villages and regions, using the experiences gained. The programs funded by UNICEF Switzerland and Liechtenstein are developed and implemented locally by UNICEF staff together with representatives of governmental and non-governmental organizations. UNICEF Switzerland and Liechtenstein visits the programs on a regular basis and receives detailed financial reports.

UNICEF's child rights work in Switzerland and Liechtenstein

UNICEF works to ensure that children and young people in Switzerland and Liechtenstein are protected, nurtured and given an opportunity to participate. The basis is the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC). Both countries are committed to the Children's Rights Convention. Nevertheless, there is still much to be done in implementing it here. Find out more at unicef.ch/national.

Monitoring the implementation of children's rights

Switzerland and Liechtenstein lack data on the situation with children, whose point of views are rarely considered. Regular monitoring is necessary to respect child rights. This gap in data is being closed with the Child Rights Barometer developed by UNICEF Switzerland and Liechtenstein and OST – the Eastern Switzerland University of Applied Sciences.

Child rights education

One of UNICEF's focal areas is raising awareness of children's rights. Because children can only expect to get their rights for themselves and others if they know what these are. Adults also have to be familiar with children's rights. One key aspect lies in the right to participate and to be heard.

Mental health

Investment in awareness raising and prevention makes it possible to boost young people's mental health. UNICEF promotes an evidence-based dialog between civil society, academia and politicians to develop needs-based and sustainable solutions to strengthen young people's mental health.

Child-Friendly Cities initiative

All children have the right to grow up in a healthy and safe environment. The «Child Friendly Cities» initiative supports cities, towns and communities in creating the conditions that make that precise goal possible. By the end of 2025, 76 municipalities had been certified in Switzerland and Liechtenstein.

Child-friendly living spaces

For healthy development, children need spaces that they can discover, conquer and change. UNICEF Switzerland and Liechtenstein advocates in the «child-friendly living spaces» field of competence for awareness raising, networking, special events, studies and publications for participative development and maintenance of «child-friendly living spaces.»

Entrepreneurial responsibility for children

Companies can have an impact on children's rights by their actions throughout the entire value chain – directly, for example with regard to child labor, marketing practices or product safety. Or an indirect impact, for example through working conditions for parents or consequences for the environment. UNICEF works to ensure that children's rights are considered in the relevant regulations, and supports companies in dealing with risks and impacts of their activities on children's rights.

Liechtenstein: The «child rights bus» was officially unveiled on June 11, International Play Day. For a year, it traveled across the country, raising awareness of children's rights among both children and adults.
